Read the following passage carefully and answer questions 27 to 34.

Fiona was the most popular girl in her class. She was kind and friendly to her classmates. She invited the whole class to her birthday party and gave everyone presents. She had so many friends that she could not spend much time with each one of them.

One day, Fiona and her classmates were having a great time, drawing and making gifts as Mrs Lim had instructed them to make three presents to give to three best friends. Fiona chose three friends from among all her friends to give her gifts to.

When her classmates had given out all their presents, Fiona was the only one who had not received any gift! She felt terrible and cried bitterly. How could it be possible? She had so many friends. One by one, her classmates consoled her, each spending a short time with her and then left her alone.

When she got home, she created a puddle with her tears, and asked her mother where she could find true friends.

"If you really want true friends, you will have to spend time with them. You must show care for them and always be available in good and bad times," answered her mother.

"But I want to be everybody's friend!" Fiona protested.

"There just isn't enough time to be available for everyone, so it's only possible to have a few true friends. The others will be playmates but they won't be close friends," said her mother wisely.
