Every morning, Mrs White would throw the remains of the previous night's dinner outside her cottage. All the animals which lived in her garden would then rush towards the food.

"Leave some for me!" croaked Tom Tortoise. The rabbit, fox and birds were already tucking in greedily. By the time Tom arrived, there was nothing left. 5

"It's not fair. I can't move fast with my short legs and heavy shell. I am always the last," Tom complained.

"Don't worry, Tom. I've saved you a piece of lettuce!" squeaked his friend, Molly Mouse. 10

As Tom chomped away, he spotted Evan Eagle soaring high up in the sky freely. He watched eagerly and wished he could do it too.

The next morning, Evan approached Tom.

"I heard you would like to learn to fly. Hence, I am here to grant your wish," explained Evan. Tom was thrilled and promised to give him anything in return. 15

Tom gasped in excitement as Evan carried him into the sky. They were moving freely above the mountains, oceans and forests.

"In return, I would like to have Molly Mouse for tea or else I would let go of you in mid-air," threatened Evan. Tom disagreed. There was no way that Tom would betray his best friend. He closed his eyes as he was dropped down like a heavy stone. 20

The king of a small kingdom was very wise. He spared no efforts in teaching his people good habits. He often did things which seemed strange to his people but whatever he did was to teach them to be diligent and careful.

One day, the king decided to test his people. Late one night, he placed a huge stone in the road which ran through the kingdom. The next day, the people were surprised to find a stone on the road. The king went out in disguise to see how the people reacted. A farmer with his wagon heavily loaded with grains rode along the road first. On seeing the stone, he went around it. Next, a young soldier came singing along. He did not see the stone. He tripped over it and went sprawling on the ground. He rose to his feet, cursed the stone and stomped away angrily.

Almost everyone who had to use the road muttered angrily and blamed the authorities for not removing the stone. Then came the miller's daughter. She saw the stone and immediately tugged at it. It was hard to move but she pulled and pulled till she moved the stone from its place. She found a box underneath. She opened it and was surprised to find that it was full of gold with a note that says, "For the person who moves away this stone." She went home with the box happily.

When the farmer, the soldier and the others heard about what had happened, they gathered around the spot and started digging the ground, hoping to find a piece of gold. They did not find anything but realised that disappointment was the price for laziness.
