Keeping Dogs Safe From Haze

Have you ever wondered how to take care of dogs during a haze?

Dr Dawn Chong from The Animal Clinic says owners have been bringing dogs to her veterinary clinic for haze-related problems like asthma, coughing and breathing difficulties. Dr Chong advises that if the Pollutant Standards Index (PSI) reading goes above 100, owners should only take their dogs out for quick toilet walks. All walks must be avoided if the reading goes above 200. Owners should also try to turn on the air conditioner or fan and change water bowls regularly.

Meanwhile, Mr Ricky Yeo, a dog owner, suggests using a simple home-made daily wipe. One just needs to add two or three drops of lavender oil to a basin of water before soaking a cloth to wipe their dogs. He says owners can also use baby wipes to clean their dogs of dust particles. He also reminds dog owners to bathe their dogs occasionally as they may get a dry rash from frequent showers.

"Owners should not only take care of themselves, but also their dogs," he adds.

Every Sunday, Alex and Joshua will wake up early and make their way to St Peter's Home, the Nursing Home for the Aged. For almost two years, the two boys have been doing so every week. Instead of going out with their friends or playing computer games at home, they choose to sacrifice their precious Sundays to serve the elderly tenants at the nursing home.	5
Upon arrival at St Peter's Home, the two teenagers will help the nurses make the beds of the tenants. Next, they will feed them breakfast. After that, Alex will lead the healthier group for a light morning workout. Joshua will then help the nurses bring others out for a morning stroll at the nearby park. Many tenants are feeble and handicapped. A few are bedridden and need complete nursing care. Some have been staying there for years. Sympathy towards their plight has driven Alex and Joshua to help these old people.	10
Last week, the teenagers were commended by their teachers and friends. Mr Tay, their principal, shared that it was a rare sight to see teenagers nowadays actively doing social work on a voluntary basis. When interviewed, both teenagers expressed their desire to help these elderly people who are being left alone and do not have anyone to cheer them up. Joshua added, "At least we could make them smile and feel wanted."	15
Their sincerity has definitely captured the hearts of the people from the media. Both Alex and Joshua will be featured in the television programme – "Extraordinary People" that highlights their dedication towards social work.	20
