Date : 19 August 2019

Class : Primary 6 _____

Total Marks :

Duration : 1 h 10 min

Part 1: Situational Writing (15 marks)

The pictures below show a conversation between Peter and his mother. Study the pictures carefully.

31 July 2019

Peter, Aunt May is coming to Singapore soon. Do you remember the beautiful blue handbag she was carrying during her last visit? Could you ask her to buy a similar one for me but in pink, please?

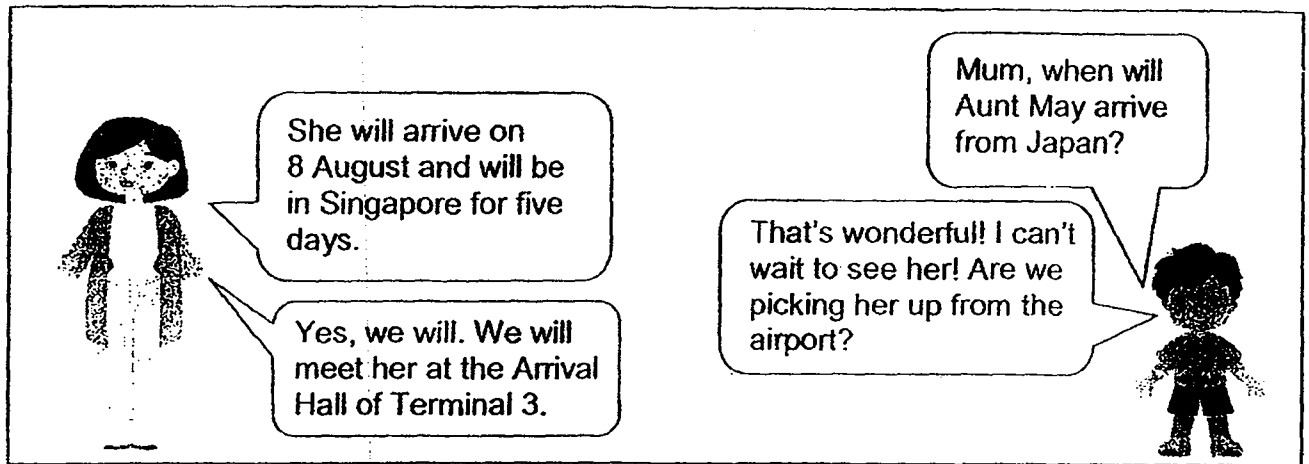

Aunt May is coming? Great! We had such a fun time when she last visited us! Mum, why don't you order the handbag from the website yourself?

I tried ordering the handbag from the website but it was in Japanese so I was unable to do so.

Peter, do you remember those snacks from Japan that Aunt May brought along during her last visit?

Oh, I see.

Oh yes! They were so tasty! Sure, I'll ask her if she could bring some for us too.

Your Task

Imagine you are Peter.

Write an email to Aunt May to ask her to help your mother buy something from Japan.

You are to refer to the pictures and information on Page 1 and Page 2 for your email.

In your email, include the following key information:

- what your mother would like Aunt May to buy her
- a description of the item
- why your mother was unable to purchase the item
- what else you would like Aunt May to bring along
- where you would meet Aunt May when she arrives

You may re-order the points. Remember to write in complete sentences.

Part 2: Continuous Writing (40 marks)

Write a composition of at least 150 words about a surprise.

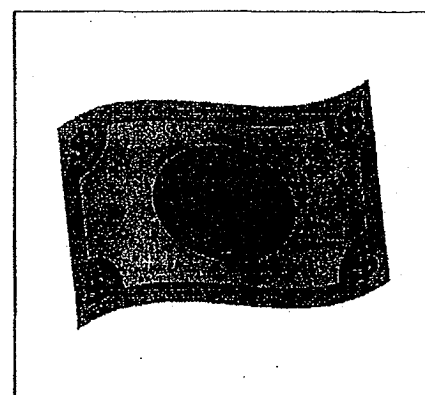

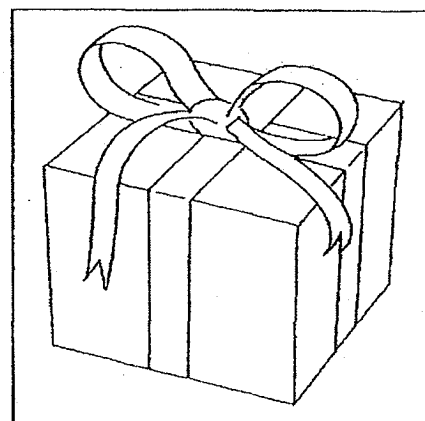

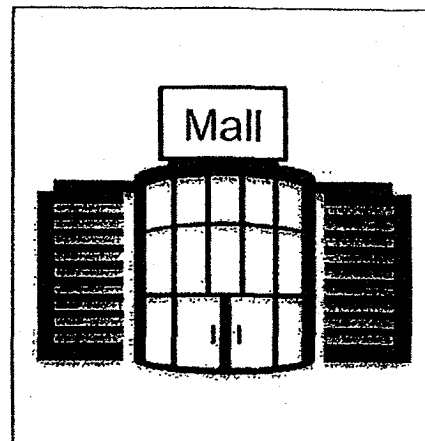

The pictures are provided to help you think about this topic.

Your composition should be based on one or more of these pictures.

Consider the following points when you plan your composition:

- What was the surprise?
- Who was/were the person(s) involved in the act?
- How did the person(s) feel about it?

You may use the points in any order and include other relevant points as well.

2019 Preliminary Examination Situational Writing

Draft 2

Dear Aunt May,

How have you been? I was so excited when Mother told me that you were coming to Singapore. I really miss you! We had such a fun time the last time you visited us.

(Introductory Sentence) Remember the handbag that you were carrying during your last visit? (Pt 1) Mum loves it very much. Could you please help her buy a similar bag, but in pink? ((Pt 2) Actually, Mum tried to order the bag from the website but it was all in Japanese, thus she was unable to do so. (Pt 3) Also, could you also bring along more of those Japanese snacks that you brought during your last visit? (Pt 4) Thank you so much! They were really tasty. When you arrive in Singapore on 8 August, we will meet you at the Arrival Hall of Terminal 3. (Pt 5) I really look forward to seeing you in Singapore soon! (Concluding statement)

With love,

Peter

Safer Internet Day
Together for a better internet

RESPECTING OURSELVES, OTHERS AND THE DIGITAL WORLD OF RESILIENCE

Safer Internet Day (SID) is an annual, worldwide event and was celebrated on 5 February 2019 to help encourage a better experience on the Internet. The tagline this year is "Be Safe, Be Smart, Be Kind". The event aims to promote safe and responsible use of digital technology for children, young people, parents, seniors and the public in Singapore.

Think twice before you click on me!

Clicky

ONE CLICK AWAY

Do we really know what we are clicking on on the Internet?

Are we aware of the consequences of our choices online?

'One Click Away' will explore the power behind the simple act of a click. It encourages us to adopt wise and considerate online actions to create a safer, smarter, and kinder Internet for all.

Look out for Clicky, our Better Internet Mascot, who gets us to think twice about what we do online! Clicky is modelled after the computer mouse – a symbol of the power we hold as we make choices online.

Section I: Comprehension (Open-ended) (20 marks)

Read this passage and answer questions 71 to 80.

Kat Wolfe awoke with a chill down her spine. She held her breath and pricked up her ears. It came again – a faint metallic scraping. Kat relaxed. The latch on the kitchen window was loose. It jiggled with every shift of wind.

Struggling upright, Kat rearranged the cushions and cast aside her blanket. She had fallen asleep on the sofa in the living room while waiting for her mother to come home. She knew how busy it could get at the animal hospital where Dr Ellen Wolfe worked. She imagined her mum bending over the operating table either fighting to save the life of a puppy which had swallowed a diamond ring or patching up a cat who had fallen a few floors. She had never complained about her mother coming home late. She knew her mother would be home as soon as she had dealt with whatever that had held her up. But the silent house did make Kat yearn for a pet of her own – a dog to keep her company. Considering her mum spent every waking hour with animals, it was absurd that that was not allowed. "We can when we have our own house," her mother would say each time the subject was mentioned and Kat would pout.

In mid-thought, Kat suddenly became aware of the absence of the sound. The gusts of an impending storm were slapping at the windows, but the kitchen window latch was silent. Could someone be holding it? Why would anyone do that unless that person... An icy finger of dread went down Kat's spine. For one millisecond, she allowed herself to believe that her mother must have forgotten her keys. Not wanting to wake her, and knowing that the window by the sink was easily forced, her mother must have climbed in. Any minute now, her mother would snap on the kitchen light but no light came on. Then, a clink of glass and a muffled curse confirmed the unimaginable. Kat lay rigid on the sofa. Her phone was charging in her room. The stairs that led up to it were in the hallway between the living room and the kitchen. There was no way she could get to them without being seen.

Kat scrambled off the sofa and slipped behind it. Crouching there, she became aware of something round and hard against her leg and her trembling hands closed around a tennis ball. The previous weekend, she had helped her mum pet-sit a Jack Russell Terrier whose owner was away. He was a cute dog, but with impossibly high energy. Kat had to spend hours retrieving toys from every corner of the house which was frustrating. The tennis ball had gone missing then. Now it struck her that if she threw the ball into the kitchen, the intruder might get a fright and think someone was coming. He might fly out of the house, never to be seen again.

Then a torch beam flared and it began to explore the room. It was only a matter of time before the intruder saw the cast-aside blanket on the sofa and put two and two together. There was no time to lose and no way to aim. Kat threw the ball as hard and high as she could. It struck the top corner of the kitchen door and ricocheted back into the living room! Kat heard the thwack of rubber against wood. The intruder heard it too, because the white beam did another zigzag. It was not enough to save him. The instant the ball struck the hardcover edition of The Merck Veterinary Manual, all 3,326 pages of it, fell. The intruder never knew what hit him. As he fell, his hands latched on to the bookcase. It dislodged itself from the wall, firing books in all directions.

Kat was cowering behind the sofa when the intruder's torch rolled under the dining-room table. Seeing that, she peered out from behind the sofa and saw it illuminate a skinny, hooded figure which attempted to sit up before being flattened by the bookcase. The final crash was deafening. Flinching at the sight and sound, she was not aware that the door had flung open at that moment and a familiar figure was standing there, amidst the cloud of dust, stupefied.
