Part 1: Situational Writing (14 marks)

1

I'm surprised you volunteered to perform in your music school's concert, Helen. You usually avoid the limelight.

I always get nervous whenever I'm asked to play in class, Mum. I'm determined to overcome my stage fright. I hope to master the new piece we're learning in time for the performance.

2

You're already taking on a huge challenge. Why don't you play your favourite piece instead? That should help you relax and enjoy the experience.

3

Mum is right! I love this piece, and I'll make sure I practise the piano daily for the next three weeks to perfect it.

4

I can watch professional pianists perform and learn from them!

5

I can't believe the concert is tomorrow! I must sleep early tonight and get enough rest.

In your writing, include the following key information:

Your Task

Imagine you are Helen.

Write an article for your music school's newsletter to share your experience preparing for a concert performance.

You are to refer to the pictures and information on page 1 for your article. The bullet point underlined below requires you to come up with your own information.

- why you wanted to perform in the concert
- how you decided on which piece to play
- how you made sure you practised the piano daily
- other than practising the piano, give two ways how you prepared for your performance
- how long it took you to prepare for your performance

You may reorder the points. Remember to write in complete sentences.

Write a composition of at least 150 words about A Decision that Changed Everything.

The pictures are provided to help you think about this topic.

Your composition should be based on one or more of these pictures.

Consider the following points when you plan your composition:

- What was the decision?
- What was the change?

You may use the points in any order and include other relevant points as well.

It was 1.45 a.m. on Friday when I was rudely awakened by the sound of a huge explosion. Then I heard the high-pitched scream of a siren. The monsoon storm had been violent for the past two days. Startled, I sat up in bed and listened carefully. The sound seemed to be coming from the direction of an old dam about three kilometres from our home. (16)

Immediately, I raced out of my room. My parents caught hold of my arm and we rushed to the attic. We stared down at what had earlier been the living room and watched in horror as the water continued to flow continuously into our home. (17)

With all communication lines unavailable temporarily, it was three hours later before help arrived. We were more fortunate as many others did not survive this calamity. I realised how unpredictable life is and how precious my parents are to me. (18) (19) (20)

Text 2

The extract below is from a children's magazine.

Positivity shapes children's growth in many ways influencing their emotional, social and physical development.

When children are in a happy environment, they feel good about themselves. It helps them feel brave when things get tough. It makes them stronger. Being positive helps children make friends and get along well with people in general. They learn to understand how others feel to work together with them.

Being positive makes children smart. It helps them ask questions and solve problems. They become good at figuring things out and learning new concepts and skills. When children are happy, they stay healthy too. It's like magic – being positive helps their bodies stay strong and they do well in school. They feel excited to learn and to try their best.

With positivity, children can achieve anything!

For each question from 21 to 25, four options are given. One of them is the correct answer. Make your choice (1, 2, 3 or 4) and write your answers in the brackets provided. (5 marks)

Kareem sighed as he counted his money again. He was still short of fifty dollars to buy the latest Speedster X bike. In order to save his pocket money to replace the bicycle he had outgrown, he had been packing sandwiches to school the last three months. While his leaner frame did not bother his parents, a neighbour took pity on him by paying him ten dollars each time he washed her car. And he saved every bit of it.	1 5
"So I ran into Auntie Kim, our neighbour who just moved in next door," Mother's voice interjected his thoughts. "Her son, Shawn, will cycle to school starting next week. Could you show him the shortcut to school later? It's a Saturday anyway!"	10
Kareem groaned. He knew his resistance was futile as Mother had probably already volunteered his service to Auntie Kim.
"Oh, and you've got mail. It's probably from Grandma. Open it."
Kareem's grandmother lived abroad but she would send him spontaneous photos and cards. He ripped the envelope open and pulled out a greeting card. A fifty-dollar note slipped out. He could not believe this windfall before his eyes!	15
"Did you know your name means 'generous' in Arabic?" Mother prompted. "Maybe that money could bring some happiness to another family."
Kareem stuffed the note into his pocket and snorted, "I have been saving so hard all this while. I deserve this money more than anyone."	20
At 2 p.m., Kareem met Shawn under their block as arranged by their mothers. The sooner he finished this errand, the sooner he could go to the bike shop. While the boys were cycling, a squirrel appeared behind a parked car and darted across the road so suddenly that the boys collided with each other and knocked down some recycling bins.	25
"Urgh!" Kareem grunted, "I forgot to warn you about the squirrel population here." He lifted his bike up while Shawn put the bins back.
Crash! Kareem and Shawn whipped their heads around. A car screeched to a halt where Shawn's bike had been and an angry man threw open his car door.	30
"You hit my bike!" Shawn yelled, running to pick up the mess of twisted bike parts.
"Blame yourself!" the man retorted, examining the front of his car. "You left your bike in the middle of the road. You should be glad my car is not damaged!" Without another word, he jumped into his car and sped off.	35
"Oh no! I was planning to help my parents save some money by riding to school daily," Shawn said anxiously.

"Whatever happened was not my fault. I'm buying Speedster X anyway," thought Kareem, though an uneasy sadness tugged at his throat as he watched Shawn push the wreckage home in silence.	40
Kareem made a beeline for his dream bike once he stepped into the bike shop. As he walked down the aisle, he noticed some older models under a big red sign that read 'Mega Clearance Sale'. A shiver ran down his spine as the image of Shawn and his wrecked bike flashed before him. He did a quick mental calculation and the sum was right: a Speedster X or two of the others.	45
"Hi," Kareem appeared at Shawn's door the next morning. "Want to ride together?"
Shawn fumed at the ridiculous question but before he could say anything, Kareem took a stride to the side, revealing two shiny identical bikes along the corridor. "What... No, it couldn't be..." Shawn's eyes grew as wide as saucers.	50
Mother who had witnessed the scene from the corridor walked up to Kareem and nudged him playfully, "Your name definitely suits you."
