TEMASEK ZOO

TOWARDS A GREENER FUTURE FOR ALL LIVING THINGS!

Our Zoo

Mother Nature is a great teacher. Our zoo is where learning truly transcends the four walls. As you tour the grounds, you will come face to face with the fragility of wildlife but at the same time, witness all its wonders.

From interdisciplinary trails, to overnight camps and behind-the-scene tours, our dynamic and interactive in-park activities are set to enliven your learning experience of the natural world that surrounds us. Through these activities, you will gain a deeper understanding of animals, birds, plants and the environment using your sense of sight and sound. You can also learn more about the need for wildlife conservation.

World-Class Care

It is our ongoing commitment to ensure that our animals receive world-class welfare and care. Nutritional care for the animals are constantly reviewed and their diets are adjusted to mirror, as closely as possible, those in the wild. Even enrichment activities mimic situations in the wild to engage the animals mentally and physically. All toys are made using safe products that closely resemble the flora and fauna found in the wildlife.

Sustainability Efforts

Part of our mission is to play an active role in working towards a greener future. We do this by adopting the use of renewable resources as well as engaging-in-continual education of our community to embrace a greener lifestyle. The key message is making the Earth a safe playground for babies of all life forms – human and animals. Ultimately, this will help us to reduce our negative impact on the environment and do our part in protecting the wildlife, day and night, in the region and beyond.

To find out more about the activities that Temasek Zoo has to offer or to sign up for them, visit our friendly staff at the counter situated at the zoo's entrance or visit our website at <http://www.temasekzoo.sg>.

Howard was seven years old when he first had his very own pet. His family always had some animals around, but none of them were truly his. But then he won George. In August that year, his father took him to a carnival held in a neighbouring school.

Once they were at the carnival, Howard was exhilarated. He bolted towards the bright red double doors. He had ten dollars in his pocket and he knew that he could not spend it all in one place. He walked up and down the hallway, carefully inspecting every room and trying to decide what was worth his precious allowance. He reckoned that bumper cars were not worth his dollars, so he continued his way. Then he saw it - the perfect reason to spend his money.

There were about fifteen fish bowls and a basket full of ping pong balls. He did not see anyone playing as he shyly entered the room. There was a girl working at the stall. He nervously walked up to her and whispered, "How do you play this game?"

She smiled sweetly and said, "Oh, it's easy. All you have to do is bounce a ping pong ball off one of those buckets and into one of the fish bowls."

"That sounds easy enough," he said, smiling at the thought of victory. "What do I get if I win?" He was expecting plastic bracelets or some stationery. None of those prizes compared to what she said next.

"If you win, you get whatever goldfish is in the bowl you hit." She continued, "A dollar for fifteen tries." Howard handed her a dollar and received a basket of ping pong balls. He held the first one gingerly in his hand until it was warm. Then he took aim and bounced it off of the bucket directly in the middle of the line. It hit the rim of the closest fish bowl and bounced onto the floor. He was disappointed, but he had fourteen more tries.

Again and again, Howard aimed and bounced the ping pong ball but to no avail. Soon, he was down to his last ball and his spirit was low. He held the ball for nearly a full minute before he took aim, closed his eyes, and tossed the ball. He stopped breathing and opened his eyes. For a second, he thought he had finally done it. Then he saw the white sphere bouncing across the room. He reminded himself that it was just a fish, and tried to stifle the tears that were threatening to spill onto his red cheeks. The pretty teenager took one look at him and said, "Oh, please don't cry. Here, I'll give you an extra ball, just because you tried so hard."

She handed him one more ball. This time, it was an orange ball. He took it. Instead of aiming at the buckets this time, he aimed at the fish. All of the fish were golden except for one. It was sitting in the back, and it was tiny compared to all the others. He decided that that would be his fish. He took aim and threw the ball. Time seemed to slow down as the ball soared in a perfect arc and landed with a plunk in the bowl. For a split second, he did not realise he had done it. Then, beaming, he turned to the girl as she handed him the bag with his white and black goldfish swimming serenely around in it. He decided to name it George. He ran out of the room excitedly. With his fish hidden behind his back, he put on his biggest smile and walked up to his father, eager to show him his prize.
